"Fundamentally, privacy is about having control over how information flows. It's about being able to understand the social setting in order to behave appropriately. To do so, people must trust their interpretation of the context, including the people in the room and the architecture that defines the setting. When they feel as though control has been taken away from them or when they lack the control they need to do the right thing, they scream privacy foul."

Facebook Settles FTC Charges That It Deceived Consumers By Failing To Keep Privacy Promises

FOR RELEASE

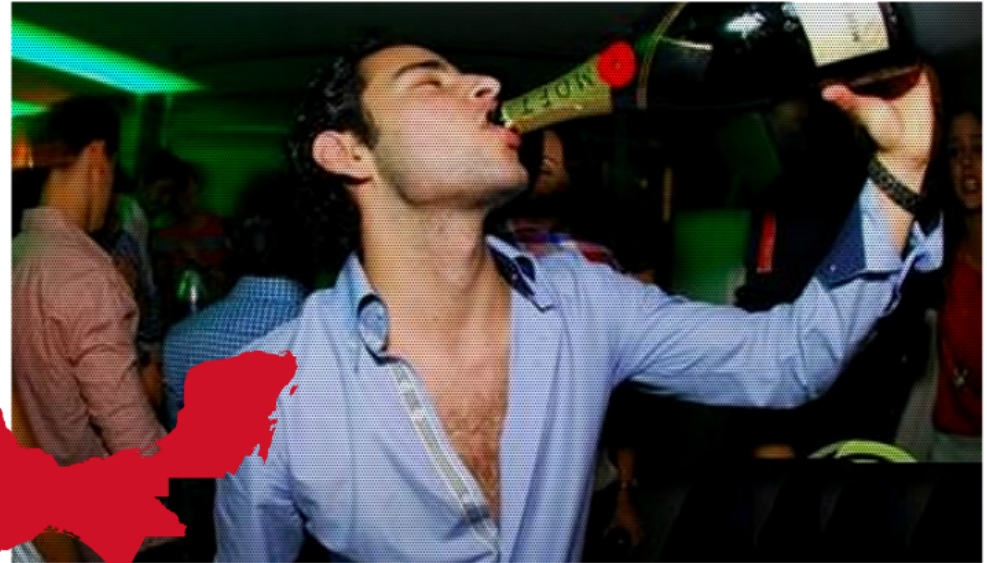

November 29, 2011

TAGS: deceptive/misleading conduct | Technology | Bureau of Consumer Protection | Consumer Protection | Privacy and Security | Consumer Privacy

The social networking service Facebook has agreed to settle Federal Trade Commission charges that it deceived consumers by telling them they could keep their information on Facebook private, and then repeatedly allowing it to be shared and made public. The proposed settlement requires Facebook to take several steps to make sure it lives up to its promises in the future, including giving consumers clear and prominent notice and obtaining consumers' express consent before their information is shared beyond the privacy settings they have established.
